

Alien Melody?

Respected cosmologists argue that there are likely millions and maybe billions of intelligent civilizations on other planets in the universe.

Assuming they're right, let's further assume that an intelligent civilization would have not only technology but artistic expression, and especially MUSIC. What are the odds that, on at least one of these worlds, a melody has been composed which is indistinguishable from a famous melody on Earth?