

It takes no strength to expect the worst from life. Some even want the worst because it justifies their anger or malaise or masks their cowardice. Strong people, without wallowing, look reality in the face and continue to expect the best in spite of life's defeats and tragedies.