

SPORT HUNTING

A feral sow roots peacefully. Three thousand feet away, a finger presses a trigger. She smells, sees, or hears no warning.

Not a fair fight, not really a fight at all. Each carnivorous species must hunt for food, but man is the only one who hunts for sport, and he does so because he can.

