

Safety Boring

Psychologist Abraham Maslow theorized in 1943 that physiological safety is one of the more basic needs of human beings. Yet, many people in their recreations or professions have always sought out danger.