

FUN WITH DICK, JANE, AND NON-DISPROVABILITY

What if Dick were just living each day over and over again without knowing it because his memories reset every 24 hours?

What if Jane's universe, including all measuring instruments, continually doubled in size every given unit of time?

What if both Dick and Jane realized, and at a young age, that there are an infinite number of non-disprovable scenarios they could imagine and further realized the extent to which they needed to reassess their view of non-disprovability as a test or standard of cogent thinking?