

Loathing in Paradise

John Milton (1608-1674) writes in a Christianized England. In his epic poem Paradise Lost, one of literature's monumental achievements, Satan is God's most beautiful and highest ranking angel, but he hates Him and is thrown out of heaven. Ironically, the more interesting character is Satan, and God is relatively boring.

So much for human nature.