

This one moment of anticipatory suffering followed by delayed physical suffering eloquently sums up the human condition. Fortunately before your life ends, if you do not stop moving about, you will have many more opportunities to intensely re-experience this moment.