Envy is for the weak. Some lack the will to work for what they want that another may have. Others, through physical or mental limitation, are unable to acquire these things but blame others because they lack the courage to acknowledge and accept these limitations. An entire political party routinely uses envious people to gain and maintain power.

