

Unpredictable History

When global government gains totalitarian control of all aspects of spoken and recorded history, the future of humanity may become entirely predictable because its past will have become unpredictable and at the whim or political necessity of the ruling class.