

What kind of person would take the time to meticulously craft this dark-themed sculpture whose existence is so tenuous and fleeting?

How generally true is it that creation takes lots of time but destruction takes an instant? In this sense, is creation like trust?

