

A photograph of a very crowded supermarket aisle. The aisle is filled with people, many of whom are pushing shopping carts. The shelves are stocked with various products, and there are signs hanging from the ceiling. The overall atmosphere is busy and packed.

Not only does the other line move faster but the closer you get the head of the line yourself, the fewer people are still behind you.