

Knowledge, Happiness

There are reasons to believe that contemporary man is more happy than man in previous epochs, but there are also reasons to believe he is less so.

In spite of the life improvements it has generated, science has not been able to produce an objective measure allowing us to fully compare general happiness differences throughout history.