

What reasons do we have for assuming that artificial intelligence will not eventually find ways to strategically alter the fundamental physical constants of nature, the speed of light, the laws of physics and chemistry, or overcome the quantum-relativity discontinuity and achieve a complete understanding of the physical universe?