

God's Unfreedom?

After finishing the first day of His universe creation,

God describes it all as "good." In beginning the second day, does he still have absolute freedom to do what He wants, or does He only have the relative freedom of limited options,

His actions being constrained by what he has done on the first day? If the answer is yes, maybe He was creating a multiverse.