

Artistic Undo

Respect the efforts of artists working in three-dimensional space. The painter knows that each brush stroke is risky. The sculptor knows this only too well when carving.

An illustration of an artist in a red shirt and blue pants painting a white bust on an easel. The artist is standing on a wooden ladder. To the left, there is a potted plant with blue leaves. The background is a warm, orange-toned circular area with a grid pattern.

Maybe computers have made risk-taking too easy for us.
