

Self-Secure?

Are there people, some relatively young, who are secure enough in themselves so that even the harshest unrelenting criticism cannot destabilize them, weaken their resolve, or create self-doubt?

Maybe instead, it's true that all people receive their sense-of-self completely from the acquiescence or approval of others, some rare ones being able to project an appearance of self-assurance in a sophisticated way.

Questions for the ages.