

The Happiness Temptation

What if it's true that life strives for or even insists on balance and the happier you become, the greater the inevitable fall into depths of despondent or even suicidal sadness?

How happy do you want to become?

Is it worth the risk?