

How many monographs and books have been written arguing for the inevitability of artificial super general intelligence? How many of their authors really believe that ai can at best do unconscious pattern recognition but that they achieve some fame and make a good living writing them anyway?

?