

The Alien Condition

Assuming the existence of intelligent and self-aware extra terrestrials, would they experience human-like anxiety over their own mortality? Would they stress over the necessity of decision making? Would they have their own insecurities? Would they have ego struggles? Would they wear clothing?

Would they be like the Krell, who by thought alone invented technology enabling them to create and use material things? Would they possess the same acquisitive and destructive impulses which allowed them to believe they were symbolically god-like?

Would they have their own "human condition"?
