
Our national political battle is equality vs. freedom. One who favors equality essentially promotes globalism, a movement antithetical to freedom. One who favors freedom essentially promotes nationalism, a movement which relatively protects freedom. Globalist leaders tell us that, in a world with weapons of mass destruction, we need the safety a world government will provide. Nationalist leaders tell us that humans, in their desire to be free, have always chosen paths of danger and risk.

Will the results of this battle be apocalyptic?
