

RAISING HECK

Sometimes a devout person experiences so much frustration over time that they uncharacteristically express anger. Does the anger of such a person carry extra credibility and power to change a situation and others by virtue of their devotion? How about Christ and the moneychangers?