

Thinker's Block

Aren't ideas infinite? With all that people have said or done or might say or do and considering everything that has happened or could happen in this world and any other world, where and when and how and for what reason, one would think this true.

So why can't I think of anything original right now? I really trying. Maybe if I hum.

Mmmmmmmmmmmmm.... No, that doesn't work. Maybe I could stand on my head while doing it. That's not feasible because at my age everything would hurt, all my blood would rush to my head, and I might even have another stroke. I sometimes think that ideas are out there waiting, just waiting to be thought by someone, but they're unwilling to make it easy.

Maybe they're like my little Chihuahua. If I move towards her in attempting to pick her up, she moves away, teasing me. Maybe passive thinking would work. I'll just let the ideas come when they're good and ready.