

Can language cut through the boundaries of life? Maybe in a distorted way; life has no clear, real boundaries, not in the world of ideas and not in the real world of continuousness where everything blends without disjunction, kind of like this sentence...

- Gerald Mander aspiring poet