

How often has it happened that a person, in a moment of simple-minded hubris, thinks they are the intimidator when really, if they were more aware, would realize they are being perceived as in some sense inferior, the intimidatee?