

We can value the quantity of our experiences and their quality. One measure of maturity is the degree to which we value the latter.